

6 trading set ups

1. 1.50% pullback

long/short (HWB) Trade:

HWB stands for halfway back or a 50 percent pullback of the previous swing.

2. 78% fade long or short

(Bully) Trade:

The Bully trade, is a trade that is used when price is reverting to the mean hence the word bully. Bully trades come into play when we are failing to make a new high or low in a range. A 78% represents a lower high or a higher low and should be used on non trend days, or when momentum has run out.

3. Previous hour support lost/gained (Flunk) Trade. The Flunk trade occurs near larger time frame reversals or breakdowns. In a long trend the previous area of support lost becomes resistance. We assume first test of resistance price will fail to move higher hence the name of the trade FLUNK Trade

4. 78% breakout long or short. (The Dive) Trade. The dive trade is a trade taken only in the direction of the larger time frame (hourly) this is a trade designed around catching a break into the next trading level higher or lower. When properly analyzed price pierces the 78% of the defined range and moves swiftly to the next level. You are basically front running the break of a previous high or low and expecting a continuation. The dive trade can also be used in wedges or break outs for defining an entry.

5. Retest point of breakout/down (Leg start) a move up or down in the market is considered a leg. legs can be seen on all time frames from daily to $tick. The “leg start” is the beginning of the move. these levels serve as important support/resistance when tested.

THE CHARGE TRADE

1. Look for a gap-up or gap down day. It doesn't matter which way the market gaps.
2. Use a 15-Minute Chart of the /ES (emini S&P 500 Futures)
3. Look for 3 consecutive Red or Green candles after the Opening Bell at 9:30 EDT
4. Draw Fibonacci Retracement Levels for the first 3 Candles
5. Look for a pullback to the 50% Fibonacci retracement level
6. BUY/SELL from the direction of the first three candles at the Nadex strike price nearest the 50% retracement level.
7. You can use a Daily Expiry and/or 1-2 hours out
8. The trade must be triggered by 1pm EDT.